Where History Comes to Life

If you're one of those people who think history is boring, it's probably because you haven't stood outside the gates of the 600-year-old Scottish castle that inspired "Macbeth." Or roamed the ranges of the American West, where cowboys and pioneers traveled two centuries ago. Or even heard Mozart's most famous sonatas performed in the green Austrian hills where they were written.

The point is, history is pretty amazing when it comes to life. A great vacation doesn't just show you the sights; it immerses you in a sense of place and culture that you can't get anywhere else. History buffs, rejoice (and history skeptics, be prepared to change your minds): We've featured a host of trips you'll love to take in this guide, including:

- A peek at life in the antebellum South through our Creole Plantation Trail drive tour (page 9).
- An up-close look at the original cobblestone streets and Spanish Colonial architecture of Old San Juan, Puerto Rico (page 34).
- A primer in Roman and Italian history, culture and architecture (page 28–29).
- A voyage to Norway, the unexpected home of the oldest annual jazz festival in Europe (page 32–33).

There's a lot of history to explore; let AAA be your guide for your next adventure. Call, click or come on in to book a trip you'll love (and maybe learn a thing or two along the way).
